Title: "Hang Tuah and the Snow White Kingdom"

Prompter: Zarina Shukur

In the glorious Sultanate of Malacca, Hang Tuah was revered as the greatest warrior and diplomat. His loyalty to the Sultan was unparalleled, and his fame had spread beyond the borders of the Malay Archipelago. One day, the Sultan summoned Hang Tuah with an important mission.

"Hang Tuah," the Sultan began, "you are to be our representative at a grand celebration in the distant northern kingdom of Aldoria. They are commemorating 100 years of peace and prosperity. You will be our only ambassador from the East, and I trust you to uphold the honor of Malacca."

With a deep bow, Hang Tuah accepted the mission, understanding the importance of such a journey. Aldoria, a kingdom in the far North, was renowned for its cold winters and the fair beauty of its people. The journey was long and arduous, but Hang Tuah, with his unwavering resolve, eventually arrived in the snow-covered land.

Upon his arrival, Hang Tuah stood out among the princes, dukes, and noblemen of Aldoria. Clad in the traditional attire of Malacca, with a kris at his side, his appearance and mannerisms were entirely different from the Northmen. He was both a curiosity and a figure of respect, his reputation preceding him even in this foreign land.

The celebrations were held in the grand palace, where Hang Tuah was introduced to the royal family of Aldoria. Among them was the young and beautiful Princess Snow White, known for her fairness, kindness, and gentle nature. Her skin was as white as snow, her lips as red as blood, and her hair as black as ebony. The people of Aldoria adored her, but her stepmother, the Queen, envied her beauty and grace.

As the festivities progressed, Hang Tuah noticed the tension between the Queen and Snow White. He observed the Queen's cold gaze and the way Snow White seemed uneasy in her presence. His instincts as a warrior and protector were heightened, sensing that something was amiss.

One evening, during a grand banquet, Hang Tuah was approached by Snow White herself. She had heard of the brave warrior from the East and was curious about his homeland. They spoke of Malacca and its vibrant culture, and in return, she shared stories of Aldoria's history and traditions. A bond of friendship quickly formed between them.

But that night, the Queen, consumed by jealousy, put her dark plan into motion. She had consulted a mirror imbued with ancient magic, which told her that Snow White's beauty would soon surpass her own. Enraged, the Queen decided that Snow White must be eliminated.

Disguised as a humble old woman, the Queen offered Snow White a poisoned apple, claiming it would protect her from the harsh winter. Snow White, unsuspecting of her stepmother's deceit, accepted the gift.

Hang Tuah, however, had been vigilant. He followed Snow White to a secluded part of the palace where the Queen, in her disguise, made her move. Just as Snow White was about to bite into the apple, Hang Tuah intervened, drawing his kris and revealing the Queen's true identity.

The Queen, realizing she had been discovered, fled into the night, but the damage had been done. Snow White, having taken a small bite, collapsed into a deep, death-like sleep. The people of Aldoria were devastated, believing their beloved princess was lost forever.

Hang Tuah, deeply saddened, vowed not to leave until he found a way to save her. Drawing upon his knowledge of Eastern medicine, he prepared a special remedy using herbs he had brought from Malacca. But more importantly, he turned to the Almighty, performing doa and seeking divine guidance.

With heartfelt prayers and careful application of the remedy, Hang Tuah administered the antidote. As he completed his prayer, he watched as Snow White slowly began to awaken. Her eyes fluttered open, and she was greeted by the sight of her Eastern protector, who had risked everything to save her.

The people of Aldoria rejoiced, and the Queen was banished from the kingdom for her treachery. Snow White, grateful for Hang Tuah's bravery, knowledge, and faith, honored him as a true hero. The bond between Malacca and Aldoria was strengthened, and Hang Tuah returned home, his mission a success.

In the aftermath, a few of Aldoria's ancient healers, who had initially failed to save Snow White, were deeply moved by Hang Tuah's unwavering faith and the effectiveness of his remedies. They were impressed not only by his knowledge but also by his devotion. These healers, having seen the profound impact of Hang Tuah's beliefs and practices, chose to embrace Islam, seeking a new path that united both their admiration for Hang Tuah and their own spiritual journeys.

The tale of Hang Tuah and the Snow White Kingdom became a legend, told in both lands as a story of courage, faith, and the triumph of good over evil. It was a testament to the power of conviction, the blending of cultures, and the enduring strength of true heroism.
